

Strong singles shine again

Nyttillverkad part 6 | Press kit

Launching February 2025

The seats are in season

For this launch of the Nyttillverkad collection, we are bringing back some of our most stunning solitaires from our archive. Neither shy nor bland, these chairs own their space with pride and confidence.

Meet the steel tube easy chair MOFALLA, originally called COX, by Niels Gammelgaard from 1978. Or rediscover the SOTENÄS armchair a in new striking colour!

Take a big step out of your comfort zone and imagine your home with one of these powerful singles.

A curvy comeback

At IKEA, we are known for our straight lines and square shapes. But soft curves are an equally important part of our past. And our future.

Smooth and comfy like the low-seated SOTENÄS armchair or curvy and confident like these KÄLLARHALS vases by Anna Efverlund.

Everlasting like popcorn and clouds, these striking favourites are back to reclaim the stage.

Colourful by coincidence?

When the GUIDE shelving unit was introduced to IKEA customers in 1985, its steel wire sides and coloured shelf edges matched the popular urban furnishing style of the time. But was its colourful look a lucky fluke?

Designer Niels Gammelgaard had been assigned to complement his popular MOMENT steel mesh sofa with a matching bookshelf.

He started by creating metal ladders similar to the legs of the MOMENT sofa. But when producing the shelves, he discovered he could get them in different colours without any extra costs.

The result is this characteristic shelving unit in six colours, now called BYAKORRE.

"I discovered that the machines making the laminated boards needed refilling with new material regularly. This meant I could make the shelves reversible, without any extra cost!"

Show off your favourite side!

Change colour to match the season, the visitor or the mood with the BYAKORRE open shelving unit.

The reversible shelves are white on one side and anthracite grey on the other. And with shelf edges in different colours (blue, green, yellow and red) or plain white, there are many different styling options. Now you can switch from discreet to colourful in no time!

“What do you think this shelving unit would cost at Trendy Store on Expensive Street? Sure, you won’t get it delivered and assembled. But at least you won’t get ripped off just because your taste matches the latest home furnishing trends.”

Text about GUIDE in the IKEA catalogue, 1985.

Furnish elegantly with oak

The GUTTANE side and coffee tables by Erik Wørts were first launched in the IKEA catalogue in 1963 as the NOVETTE benches.

The tables, with solid oak legs and oak veneer tabletops, combine timeless design with modern functionality and add an elegant touch wherever they are placed. The characteristic little ledge also prevents magazines and cups from falling off the edge.

A light that never goes out...

At least not out of style. The popular rice paper lamps are back in fashion and their different variations seem endless. At IKEA, the first one saw the light of day in 1969 and was then simply called RISLAMP (rice lamp, in Swedish).

When the updated version, the GULLSUDARE pendant lampshade, returns in Nyttillverkad with an impressive diameter of 70 centimetres, it's even more of a statement piece. But still at a humble price.

Keep it simple with a spherical shape and classic symmetrical lines and let GULLSUDARE brighten up anything from the bedroom to the office!

Blue skies ahead

This blue and white pattern by textile designer Sven Fristedt was first launched on one of the very first duvet covers in the IKEA catalogue in 1973.

The pattern was initially made with screen printing, which made it too expensive for large quantities. In 1981, Sven modified the pattern so it could reach a larger audience and it reappeared as SKYAR on bed linen, fabrics and wallpaper.

Now, the pattern is back again on the ÄNGSVITVINGE bed linen.

Put your head in the clouds

Imagine drifting off to slumberland on white, fluffy clouds. With the ÄNGSVITVINGE bed linen, you can!

Shiny, comfy and foldable

The MOFALLA easy chair is something as rare as a foldable living room chair. Designed by Niels Gammelgaard, the tubular steel chair was first released in the IKEA catalogue in 1978 as COX.

Niels wanted to achieve the perfect balance between comfort and aesthetics and integrated metal legs with a thick canvas fabric to avoid having metal in the front of the seat.

The chrome-plated legs gave the chair a modern expression that suited the interior design trend of the time.

A popping pattern

The MODIG KORN pattern by Anna Efverlund was originally designed for the children's department, where it was part of a series of patterns inspired by comic book illustrations. The popcorn pattern came out in the IKEA catalogue in 1997 in the form of bed linen in yellow and green.

Now, the pattern returns for a more mature audience with bigger illustrations in black-and-white as KLIPPBRÄCKA bed linen, 3-metre pre-cut fabric and cushion covers.

Meet the designer Anna Efverlund

The Swedish designer Anna Efverlund is an industrial designer who started her career designing bikes for Monark in Brazil. In 1980, she began working for IKEA and during her 34 years at the company, she didn't miss a beat. She travelled to China, India and Thailand and designed everything from the FAMNIG heart-shaped cushion to LED lights. In the '90s, she was also part of the team putting together the first SMÅLAND play area, which took five years to complete due to all the rules and regulations!

In 2014, Anna started to experience signs of burnout. She decided to retire, turned off the computer and never opened it again. Instead, she turned to embroidery, sewing and other handicrafts as an outlet for her inherent creativity.

Anna's lively spirit can be felt in all her products, and this year, we are happy to bring back her pattern MODIG KORN and the SNURRA vases in the Nyttillverkad collection.

Strong profile, soft shape

The beautiful and fun SNURRA glass vases by Anna Efverlund from 1995 are now back as KÄLLARHALS.

This time, coloured with clear lacquer in yellow and orange, they are made for both wide bouquets and long stems.

Cheers to chairs!

Spin, sleep, entertain or relax. Each chair with a different purpose and personality, but all striking enough to be used as practical decoration.

Which one do you crave?

You don’t have any
chair in the room,
you just have a structure you can sit in. Fantastic!”

Living room lipstick

Now back in red, the SOTENÄS armchair will instantly cheer up your living room. The armchair was designed by Gillis Lundgren as PUCK in 1969 and has previously been released in the Nyttillverkad collection in yellow.

Share a kiss in this low and wide loveseat roomy enough for two.
