

Top 10 Store & organise Trends Canada

Mess is a masterpiece

12% of Canadians see clutter as a form of creativity – with 31% in China, but just 4% in Japan.

That's how much time Canadians spend a year looking for stuff which is equivalent to approximately 28 minutes a day.

30% find their kitchen countertops to be the most challenging area of the home to keep clutter-free.

5 minutes

a day is spent searching for a charger – that's 30 hours per year, gone.

Hidden Cost of Clutter

21% bought duplicates of an item because they could not find the original

Cooking up a solution

11% of us use the oven as storage – rising to just over 25% if you live in South Korea.

83%

keep things purely for sentimental reasons – even when they're never used or shoved out of sight.

The pre-party panic

1 in 10 of us have cancelled having guests over because of clutter – rising to 28% in China. And 37% shuffle clutter from room to room before guests arrive, peaking at 49% in the UK.

The ex in the bottom drawer

27% hide memorabilia from past relationships. Plot twist: men are 8 percentage-points more likely to do it than women.

The countertop battleground

The kitchen counter is the No.1 spot for clutter (24%) and – would you believe? – arguments too.