What is the TESAMMANS collection?

Discover the new TESAMMANS collection, a collaboration between IKEA and design duo Raw Color. Together, we created a collection of furniture, textiles and decoration filled with surprising color combinations – ready to brighten up your space and add an unexpected twist to what you already have at home.

The collection combines our IKEA home furnishing knowledge with Raw Color's unique design language of minimal shapes and graphic lines, as well as their understanding of the power of color.

About Raw Color

At IKEA, being colorful and bold is in our DNA. Color is transformative: it can offer a fresh look, a new style – as well as joy. Who better to partner with on a color-powered collection than Dutch design duo Raw Color? The Eindhoven-based design studio – headed by Daniera ter Haar and Christoph Brach – works with graphic design, photography and product design where color plays a defining role. Their work has been showcased in museums and galleries around the world, including The Aram Gallery, Cooper Hewitt Museum and Stedelijk Museum Amsterdam, among others. Aside from their studio work, they are also tutors at Design Academy Eindhoven.

For this limited-edition collection, they have put the spotlight on how different shades interact with each other and with other objects. Combining the home furnishing knowledge of IKEA and their expertise, we created a collection of 18 products filled with unique color combinations.

Color
the everyday

Surprising color combinations

With the TESAMMANS collection, Raw Color played a lot with the ability of colors to transform everyday objects, mixing bright, saturated shades with more muted ones. The result: an unexpected yet harmonious palette that brightens up the home.

These cushion covers, throw and rug make it easy to get an impactful and coordinated look with tones and patterns that already go perfectly together.

Wrap yourself in color

Fun fact: this cozy throw has more colors than you think! “The throw plays with visual perception with graphic lines and solid colors,” says Raw Color. “Thin lines of two tones seem to blend into one hue. When you come closer, you can distinguish the separate colors.”

Sweet but not edible

This side table, made of corrugated steel sheet, is not just a piece of eye candy. It's a table and a storage unit in one – with plenty of space to store things under the lid.

“We always look for colors that enhance each other. It’s like a recipe; you must find the right balance to make an object sparkle!”

– Christoph Brach, Raw Color

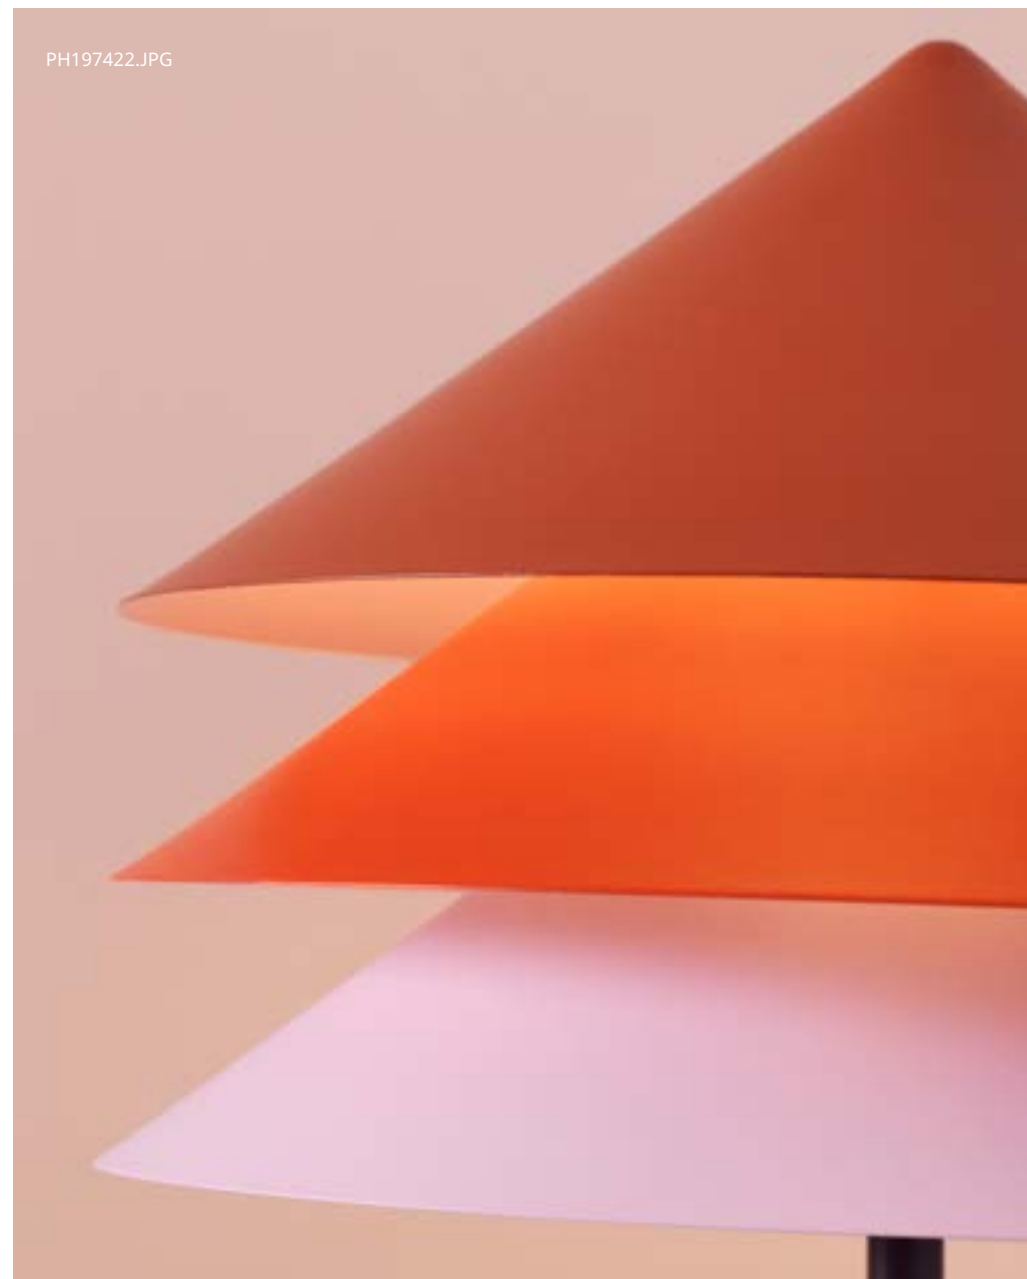

Being two-faced is a good thing

The TESAMMANS rug invites you to come closer with its striking stripes and bold colors. Handmade with 100% wool, it has the same pattern on both sides so you can turn it over for longer use.

Dare to be bright

This table lamp is a design piece on its own, and an easy way to add character and personality to any space. With its stacked design, the colors transition from dark tones to lighter ones, resulting in different light reflections.

“The gently curved metal objects of the hanging decoration catch the light and expose shadows, which creates an experience of them changing shape and color.”

– Daniera ter Haar, Raw Color

Happy and calm

Like your own piece of sculptural art, the hanging decoration invites you to pause, gaze and daydream for a bit. Watch as the shapes catch the light, and the colors subtly change as they move. Its sophisticated yet playful design adds calm, color and charm to your everyday.

Bring a little joy where you need it

This practical storage unit adds color and life to any space with its unique design and can be easily moved to where you need it. "The storage unit is very functional as you can access it from different sides," says Raw Color. "When you walk around it, the grids create a moiré effect. The bold colors that we used give the object a strong character."

A brilliant welcome

The hallway is the calling card of your home where first impressions count. These colorful and coordinated tealight holders and trays say: you're warm and welcoming, you love good design, and you never lose your keys!

A happy space to work from home

Bursts of color keep inspiration and creativity flowing at your work-from-home spot. Grab a coffee in the colorful mug with matching napkins to make your break more special. And with a fun wall clock like this, you will never miss your next meeting.

“When we were developing the clock, I think Raw Color took a bold step by trying something totally different. It’s not only a clock, it is a moving decorative object.”

– Philip Holm, Product Design Engineer, IKEA of Sweden

It's always time for color

This eye-catching abstract clock is a constantly changing work of art. The green, pink and blue circles move to show hours, minutes and seconds with subtle pointers.

Make everyday a celebration

Turn everyday meals into a feast for the eyes by setting a table with these carafes, glasses and napkins. And who says you have to stop at one ceiling lamp? Multiple lampshades create an even bigger color impression.

Cheers to color

These glassware items are like little pieces of art for the table. The pale pink and light brown glasses create shadows when light shines through and can be placed on top of the milky blue carafe. And of course, they hold drinks too!

How colors come to life:

An interview with design duo Raw Color

Colors are fascinating as they do not exist alone. They are dependent on light and other colors. Much like people, they relate to the world around them.

This curious and interactive ability of color is central to the TESAMMANS collection. In this interview, Raw Color – comprised of Daniera ter Haar and Christoph Brach – shares more about their intuitive approach to color, the process of designing the collection, and what makes color truly special.

What is the TESAMMANS collection about and how did the collaboration come about?

The collection is about the interaction of colors. We believe that color is never alone, and it needs company to be what it is. The collaboration with IKEA started two years ago, and during the process, we investigated different color combinations and which kind of products would benefit from them.

Color is never alone, color needs company. What do you mean by that?

A color only really becomes what it is next to other colors. For example, a red next to a pink will look tonal, but when placed next to a blue it will look brighter and more contrasting.

Aside from the interaction between the colors, the TESAMMANS collection is also about the interaction of different objects. Many items in the collection are not alone: the pair of vases, tealight holders and the carafes and glasses, for example. You can place them next to or on top of each other, and the visual expression changes.

Can you tell us about the process of designing the collection?

Working with IKEA was very special for us. It's not often that we are asked to design a collection of 18 products. We started with around 50 sketches until the idea crystalized into the interaction of color.

Matching the right shades with each other plays a key role; for us, this is continuous research. When we were developing the collection, we really loved the process of applying colors to different materials and seeing how the same shade looks different when applied to ceramics, metal, and textiles. In total, there are 15 different colors in the collection.

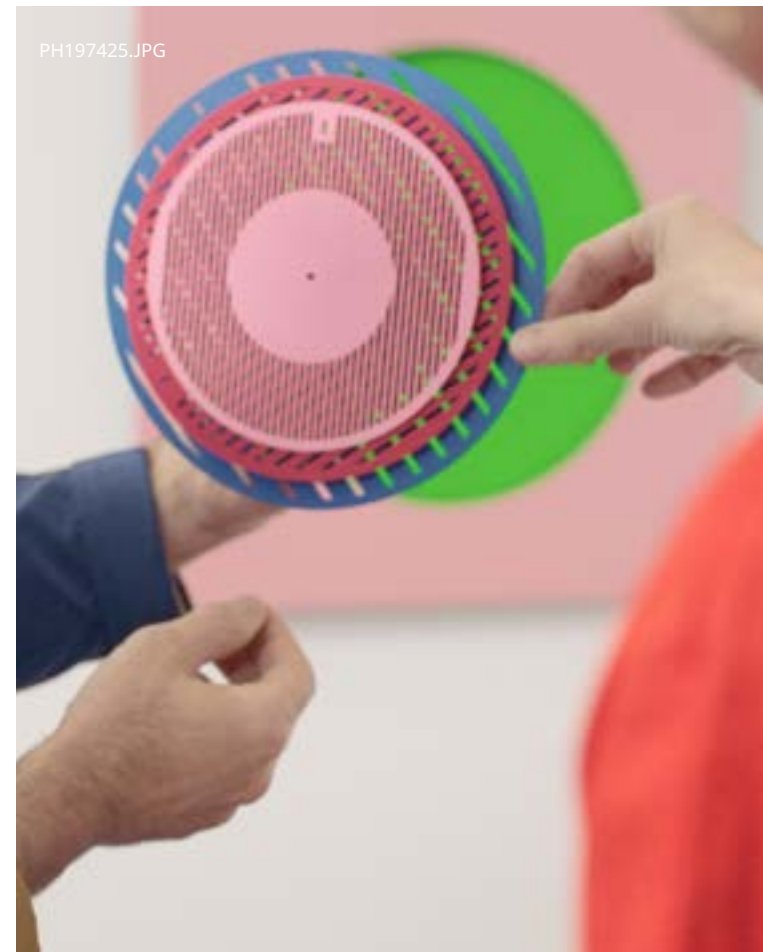

What is special about color?

The special thing about it is that it's very transformative. If you have a cube that is pink, it will be totally different than a black one. On the other hand, it is something that we humans perceive very quickly. It can have beneficial effects on our well-being and for our surroundings. We believe that color is a very powerful visual tool.

The color combinations are really unique, what is the thinking behind them?

We have an emotional and intuitive approach to color. We are very attracted to how different shades work with each other. Sometimes it is about the blending of two colors, like with weaving with different colored yarns, which results in a new blended tone.

It is also about balance. We always try to balance saturated colors with muted tones. For example, we would place a bright red next to a pink or a brownish yellow. We always look for colors that enhance each other. It's like a recipe; you must find the right balance to make an object sparkle!

PH197425.JPG

PH197426.JPG

You work a lot in different design disciplines, materializing color in different ways. What is important when working with colors for the home?

Applying colors to the home is very special because you know it will be used by somebody. It's very personal, so we must consider that it blends into somebody's home. It could be a challenge for a very outspoken palette, but we believe it could be a little beacon in a home. It could bring joy and a colorful character to somebody's interior.

A question we asked ourselves when making the products was, "If you would see the object for the first time, would you buy it and place it in your home?". Are the products close to our own taste? Will we buy them ourselves and be happy with them?

Can you tell us more about the paper prototypes?

In our work, we usually use a lot of paper prototypes. Starting from a 2D sketch, paper is a great way to materialize something physically. And with colored paper, we can test different color combinations instantly. We can also test different sizes and proportions.

What do you see as the most striking feature in the collection?

We played a lot with the transformative aspect of colors. For example, the throw plays with visual perception with its graphic lines and solid colors. Thin lines of two tones seem to blend into one hue. When you come closer, you can distinguish the separate colors.

With the vases, you can turn them or stack them and a cooler or warmer palette will appear. And with the different-toned lampshades, the viewer can experience how color influences the reflection of light. The objects can transform.

Do you have a favorite color in the collection?

We really love pink. It's not too bright, it's a color that goes nicely with many different tones. It's also the shade that we have the longest debate about: what is the right kind of pink? How much yellow and how much black should be in it? We need to go through many swatches to find the 'right' pink!

What do you hope this collection can add to people's everyday lives?

We hope that this collection will bring some positivity to people's homes, and that we can also challenge them to apply some color in their spaces. Sometimes, people can be scared of using it, with white interiors becoming more default. But color can have so much positive influence on their direct surroundings. We hope that with this collection, people will invite color and joy into their homes.

“Color can have beneficial effects on our well-being and our surroundings. We believe that color is a very powerful visual tool.”

– Christoph Brach, Raw Color
