A line drawing illustrating the connection of a water hose to a faucet. The faucet has a single-lever handle. A flexible braided hose is attached to the bottom of the faucet's spout. The hose is shown extending downwards and branching into two separate connections at the bottom of the frame. Each connection consists of a hexagonal nut-like fitting secured by a pair of pliers. The background features a diagonal line representing a wall or countertop surface.

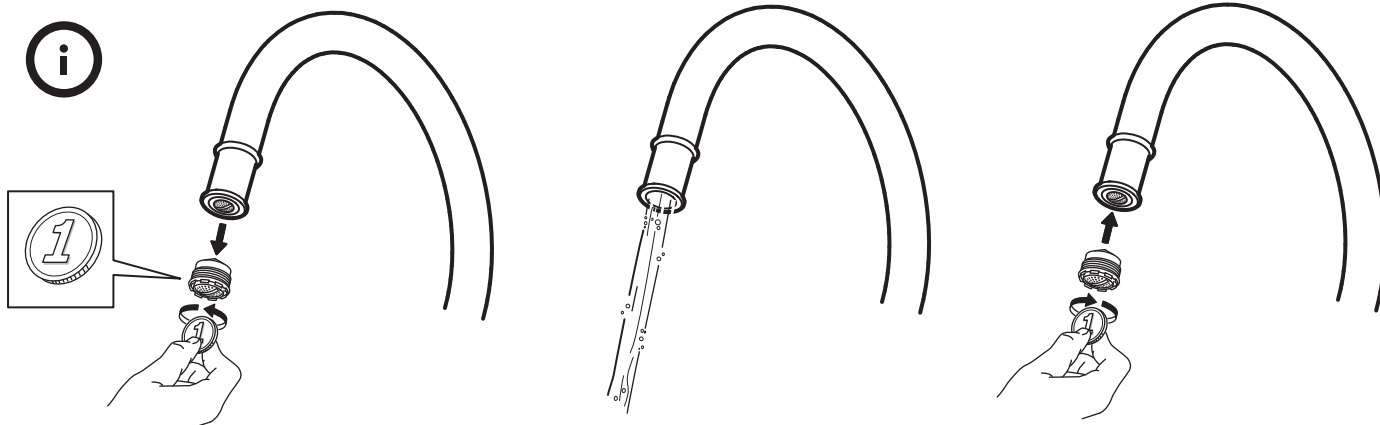

IMPORTANT! Do not tighten too hard: this can damage hoses/pipes and washers.

ATTENTION ! Ne pas serrer trop fort : cela pourrait abîmer les flexibles/tuyaux et les joints.

¡ATENCIÓN! No aprietes demasiado, ya que se pueden dañar las tuberías/conductos y las juntas.
